We will also be working on a new series. One of them is a post-mortem of The Bionic Skeleton project at the end of June/July 2014. A second one is about our development during the last two years under the supervision of Igor Kralov. There will be a post by the end of April, and a third one by the end of June, and then we'll get back to the articles.

If he had met me I would have loved it, but this has been more like the day after a long day at work and I needed to get some sleep. I need to write this post and not do anything but think about my husband. He's an inspiration to me and our family and one that has helped me grow. He doesn't deserve the kind shit that's coming his way. At least, not in this way..
